Republican Bigwigs Gather In Washington To Check On Various Tours

CINCINNATI, Dec. 6—Republicans in western states are united and confident of victory in the 1940 presidential campaign, U. S. Sen. Robert A. Taft, Ohio candidate for the G. O. P. nomination, told followers following his return from a speaking tour. He was to leave today to tour eastern states.

Taft spent two weeks visiting and making speeches in Missouri, Iowa, Nebraska, Colorado, Oklahoma and Texas. Commenting on his trip, he said:

"Everywhere I went the Republicans were united and confident. While Oklahoma and Texas are Democratic states, the number of persons who express open opposition to the New Deal is greater than in the North.

Trend Continuing

"In my opinion the strong Republican trend exhibited in 1938 is continuing. The people's attention may have been diverted by war, but apparently their belief is growing stronger that the New Deal has failed to help the people and has endangered the whole basis of American freedom and progress."

He added that such public opinion apparently assures success for the Republicans in northern states.

Taft spoke in Marion last night and was to leave today on a speaking tour of eastern states.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 6—An array of Republican leaders began gathering in Washington today for what amounts to an informal "convention" over financing, strategy and chances of success. (Continued on Page Four)

Highway Patrol Takes Up Trail

N. E. Reichelderfer, executive vice president of the Circleville Savings and Banking Co., is shown pointing to the vault from which robbers obtained the bulk of the $11,514.17 stolen Tuesday at noon.

Insurance Company Covers Loss Shortly After Holdup; Robbers Identified As Clintonville And Galion Fugitives

A dirty Chevrolet car, carrying the same license tags as those seen on the vehicle that fled after the Circleville Savings and Banking Co. robbery Tuesday noon, was reported traveling west from Gallipolis shortly after noon Wednesday. The tags were identified by the state highway patrol as FQ-95. The patrol immediately went on the air to set up an Ohio River district blockade.

Four outlaws who robbed the Circleville Savings and Banking Co., Tuesday noon, of $11,514.17 in the city's first bank holdup in history have evaded local officers, state highway patrolmen and sheriffs of several surrounding counties.

Latest developments were that a dirty Chevrolet coach with license plates FQ-95, answers the description of one used in robberies in Clintonville and Galion last summer. The Clintonville Federal Savings & Loan Association was robbed of $960 on July 17. On August 15 a Galion bank was robbed of $2,500. The tags were stolen in Cleveland last April.

Blockades established throughout the state were removed about 4:30 p. m. Tuesday after no trace of the bandits could be found. Although the bandit car was reported to have turned from Court Street westward on High Street the police department later learned that Mrs. James Fouch, East Ohio Street, had seen a speeding car turn off West High Street and go southward on Western Avenue. Police said Mrs. Fouch told them two men were kneeling in the back of the car.

Loring Davis, driver for Helvering and Scharenberg, reported to authorities that a speeding car carrying four men narrowly missed his truck at the Cedar Hill crossroads early Tuesday afternoon. He thought the car might have been the one that hauled the robbers away from the bank.

Authorities believe the bandits escaped toward southern Ohio. Lawrence Johnson, agent for the Ohio Casualty Company, Hamilton, presented a check Tuesday at 6 p. m. to the bank for $11,514.17.

No Bills Large
It was learned Wednesday that in the money taken none of the bills was larger than $20. The bandits used a satchel to carry the money.

SEARCH FOR QUARTER OF MILLION BENEATH GROUND YIELDS COIN

HOLLYWOOD, Dec. 6—The great Hollywood Bowl treasure hunt expected to yield at least $250,000 buried beneath the bowl 74 years ago by Mexicans, paid its first dividend today—an 1869 2-cent piece.

Worth about 75 cents to coin collectors, the "precious metal" was found 24 feet beneath the surface of the ground in the shaft being sunk by Henry Jones and Roy Johnson, the treasure seekers who use an electric "doodlebug" to locate metal. Jones was not sure whether the coin was a "rib" by sarcastic bystanders, or whether it might be part of the treasure, which was supposed to have belonged to the Mexican liberator, Benito Juarez, in the spot where the open air amphitheatre now stands.

Jones said he hoped to find the real treasure some time today.

Small Boat Attempting To Take Men Back Home Held Off Carolina Coast

WASHINGTON, Dec. 6—The "mystery" yawl, Lekala, seized by the coastguard in American territorial waters off North Carolina yesterday, was attempting to return a half dozen German sailors stranded in the United States to their native land, it was learned officially today.

Members of the crew told customs officials, according to government officials in Washington, that they hoped to contact some large German ship on the high seas, or, failing that, attempt to cross the Atlantic in the little yawl.

The Lekala, a 43-foot craft, is being held until the crew members post bond required under federal law when persons leave United States shores to contact a boat of a belligerent power.

It was learned that customs officials first became interested in the Lekala about a month ago when it was outfitting for sea in Baltimore harbor. Their interest was aroused by the surprisingly heavy store of supplies that the boat was loading.

Inquiries of the crew brought information that the ship had been purchased for use in taking German sailors stranded in the United States by outbreak of the European war either back to Germany or to meet some German vessel at sea.

The Lekala was permitted to sail, and proceeded to New York City.

Meanwhile customs officials referred the matter to the Department of Justice and U. S. Attorney John Cahill in New York took up (Continued on Page Four)

RUSSIANS MAKE FIRST MOVE FOR RUMANIAN PACT

LONDON, Dec. 6—The Communist International made its first approach to Rumania today, emphasizing, in an official statement, the advantages to be gained from a pact of mutual assistance with the Soviet, according to an Exchange Telegraph dispatch from Moscow.

"A Russo-Rumanian mutual aid pact, similar to the Baltic pacts, will be a most important factor for a bright future and the free and peaceful development of peoples inhabiting Rumania."

Under the terms of the Baltic pacts, Russia obtained military and naval bases in Estonia and Latvia. Italy has strongly indicated she will oppose with force any similar attempted Soviet penetration of the Balkans.

Empire Trying To Starve Women, Children, Reich Spokesmen Declare

BERLIN, Dec. 6—The German government moved forward today with its carefully laid plan for a mighty military and economic blow against England designed to break the British blockade of Germany.

The Reich is determined to compel the British to abandon their "unrestricted blockade" and put an end to the seizure of German exports, which this country brands as a violation of the international code governing humanitarian warfare.

Its direct objective, Germany declares, is the "starvation of women and children," and as a result, the Reich will be justified in using similar methods of warfare.

Germany's reprisals will take place in both of the military and economic fields, the upshot being that neutral nations of Europe will be caught in the relentless pincer of a combined Anglo-German grip.

Officers said the men admitted to Police Chief Russell Poole of Chillicothe that approximately 500 pounds of corn found in their car had been stolen from the farm of their employer, Glen Grimes, also of New Holland.

The sheriff's department said Mr. Grimes was expected to file charges Wednesday against the men.

Reds Lose Many Men And Much Equipment, According To Reports Coming From Helsingfors; Liberty Celebrated

LONDON, Dec. 6—Italy is bringing strong pressure to bear on Germany to mediate the Russo-Finnish war, the London Evening Standard reported today.

The Italian plan constitutes establishment of a "joint" government in Finland comprising members of the cabinet of Premier Risto Ryti as well as delegates from the Communist-inspired regime established at Terijoki.

Russia would be granted strategic points in Finland essential to protection of Leningrad, the Standard said, expressing belief that successful mediation of the Finnish war "might lead to an era of general negotiation in the West."

HELSINGFORS, Dec. 6—Battling heroically to stem the invading Russian tide, Finland's fighting men claimed new triumphs today, including destruction or capture of 150 Soviet tanks and the killing of 2,000 Red army troops in a single engagement on the Carelian front.

While the embattled nation observed "Liberty Day," the 22nd anniversary of Finnish independence, army leaders joyfully hailed arrival of 50 Italian warplanes, along with Italian technicians and training pilots.

Authorities hastened to incorporate the aircraft into the small Finnish air force.

On the Carelian isthmus, it was asserted, two Russian tank regiments of 40 machines each were destroyed and 2,000 or more Red soldiers killed. An official communique said more than 60 other heavy Soviet tanks had been captured since Saturday.

These claims followed reports that Finnish planes bombed the Soviet air base at Murmansk, destroying 60 Russian planes. (London reports said Finnish air raiders also bombed Paldiski, Baltic port recently leased by Russia from Estonia.)

Russian troops besieging the vital city of Petsamo in the Far North were heavily reinforced. City Strongly Guarded
It was believed, however, that the Soviet forces there are still too weak to attempt a serious effort to storm the flame-gutted city, where the Finnish defenders have constructed sturdy fortifications.

According to reports in Helsingfors, the Finns still hold all strategic positions north of Lake Ladoga and along the Carelian frontier. The Russians have not yet reached the main Finnish defenses, the strong "Mannerheim line."

Morale of the Finnish air force received marked encourage as a result of the arrival of the Italian planes, 10 of which were reported to be the gift of the Italian people. The planes were rapidly being put in order for action and the Finns expected that the Italian machines would prove as useful against Russian planes in Finland as they did in Spain during the civil war.

Planes Fire on Troops
The Russians were said to have suffered heavy losses when Finnish aviators swooped over the country between Petsamo and Murmansk, machine-gunning columns of Russian troops and destroying planes on the Murmansk air field.

LONDON, Dec. 6—A twin-engined German monoplane crashed into the sea off Sheringham today after narrowly missing several buildings and a gasometer in the town.

Also during the night two large black German planes flew over the Thames estuary. Searchlights immediately picked them up, whereupon the German craft dived almost to the water's edge and then flew away.

DIES MAY CALL TROTSKY FROM MEXICAN HOME

House Committee To Probe Actions Of Communists In United States

CHAIRMAN ILL IN TEXAS

Stalin's Arch Foe Ready To Tell Many Details About Internationale

WASHINGTON, Dec. 6—A series of hearings to explore charges that Soviet Russia seeks to make Mexico a puppet state and a base for spread of Communism in the Western Hemisphere, may be conducted by the Dies committee, it was disclosed today.

Leon Trotsky, one of the founders of Soviet Russia and now an exile in Mexico, has asked to appear before the committee and may be brought to the United States for this purpose.

These developments followed receipt of reports from committee investigators on Chairman Martin Dies' arrival at his home in Orange, Texas, where he was ordered by his physician to take a month's rest.

The reports, however, were described by committee sources as "So important," that Dies probably will abandon plans for a rest and start an investigation.

To Reveal Facts

Trotsky, it was reported, is anxious to bare many secret documents dealing with his fight with Russian Dictator Josef Stalin and work of the Communist Internationale in the United States.

A committee investigator spent more than a week with Trotsky in Mexico, during which the former world Communist leader was said to have offered his cooperation in a battle against "Stalinism."

Dies was described as being deeply impressed by information from other sources to the effect that the Communist Internationale has established a base in Mexico for operation in the United States, Latin and South America.

Dies was said to have received information "from a very high authority" that Soviet Russia seeks to take over Mexico as much as it hopes to take over Finland—except that the penetration is to be accomplished by propaganda, subsidizing of Mexican politicians and other political methods.

Reports were also received by Dies that Mexican organization leaders contacted persons of political influence in the United States before the Mexican government expropriated American oil property in an effort to forestall retaliation.

To Tell Of Break

Trotsky, it was understood, does not plan to give testimony regarding Communist activities in Mexico, but chiefly to detail Communist efforts to infiltrate their doctrine into the United States while he was in power in Russia. He was said to be anxious to tell the "inside" story of his break with Stalin and his ouster from power despite the fact that he helped found Soviet Russia and was people's commissar for military affairs, in charge of a huge standing army.

The Dies committee investigator who visited Trotsky in his Mexican home, it was learned, was shown scores of documents which have long been considered confidential. At one time a tailor and Communist lecturer in New York, Trotsky joined with Lenin and others to start the Bolshevik revolution which transformed Soviet Russia into a new political state.

For many years Trotsky was regarded as one of the three most important of the Russian rulers. He devoted much of his time to building up the Red army and to preaching of world revolution. Trotsky, Dies committee attaches say, has intimate knowledge of Communist work in the United States, Germany and other nations before his ouster a decade ago.

HIRAM JOHNSON READY TO SEVER SOVIET RELATION

LOS ANGELES, Dec. 6 —

U. S. Senator Hiram Johnson of California reiterated today that he was solidly in favor of severing diplomatic relations with Russia.

Senator Johnson, in Los Angeles to confer with Republican leaders, termed the Soviet invasion of Finland a course "that arouses utmost detestation of the deed and abhorrence of the perpetrator."

"We should," he declared, "sever diplomatic relations with Russia, which is all we can do short of war, but not even by war could we save Finland."

As for his attitude toward war, Senator Johnson declared: "It is my feeling that the United States in its actions toward Russia or any other nation should exert every possible effort to avoid walking down the bloody path of war."

BUND'S LEADER READY TO BEGIN SING SING TRIP

Fritz Kuhn's Only Sign Of Nervousness Is Seen In Chain Smoking

WITNESSES IN JEOPARDY

Prosecutor To Press Probe Against Two Blamed For Perjury

NEW YORK, Dec. 6 — Fritz Kuhn was to be whisked off to Sing Sing prison today to start serving a 2½ to 5 year term for stealing money from his German-American Bund but his incarceration there will not end the work of state and federal authorities.

In sentencing Kuhn, Judge James G. Wallace expressed a belief that two of Kuhn's witnesses, James Wheeler-Hill, national secretary of the Bund, and Willy Luedtke, of the German-American Business League, had committed perjury. Prosecutor Herman J. McCarthy assured the judge that "proper action" would be taken.

Federal authorities are investigating Kuhn's citizenship papers and federal agents are scrutinizing his income tax reports for 1937 and 1938.

Kuhn spent the night in Tombs prison after hearing sentence exhibiting the same steely restraint he displayed in court. He had no visitors and his only sign of nervousness was chain smoking of cigars.

If his behavior is good, Kuhn will be eligible for parole in 20 months. On Dec. 13, Judge Wallace will announce what if any action is to be taken against Kuhn's attorney, Peter L. F. Sabbatino, whose conduct at the trial brought the threat of a contempt citation.

Another interview will be Jackie Cooper who is now classed as a veteran of the Hall in spite of his years. Young Mr. Cooper has just appeared in "What A Life."

When the Radio Theatre's marquee lights up on Monday, December 11, Carole Lombard, Cary Grant, and Kay Francis will be the names over the production, "In Name Only." This is the same cast which appeared in the successful movie and the trio will be heard under the guidance of Cecil B. DeMille at 9 p. m. over the Columbia network.

"In Name Only" is the love-story of Julie Eden, played by Miss Lombard, and Alec Walker, enacted by Cary Grant. The complicating factor in the story is Alec's wife, Malda, an unsympathetic part played by Misseddm part played by Kay Francis.

DIES MAY CALL TROTSKY FROM MEXICAN HOME

House Committee To Probe Actions Of Communists In United States

CHAIRMAN ILL IN TEXAS

Stalin's Arch Foe Ready To Tell Many Details About Internationale

WASHINGTON, Dec. 6—A series of hearings to explore charges that Soviet Russia seeks to make Mexico a puppet state and a base for spread of Communism in the Western Hemisphere, may be conducted by the Dies committee, it was disclosed today.

Leon Trotsky, one of the founders of Soviet Russia and now an exile in Mexico, has asked to appear before the committee and may be brought to the United States for this purpose.

These developments followed receipt of reports from committee investigators on Chairman Martin Dies' arrival at his home in Orange, Texas, where he was ordered by his physician to take a month's rest.

The reports, however, were described by committee sources as "so important," that Dies probably will abandon plans for a rest and start an investigation.

To Reveal Facts
Trotsky, it was reported, is anxious to bare many secret documents dealing with his fight with Russian Dictator Josef Stalin and work of the Communist Internationale in the United States.

A committee investigator spent more than a week with Trotsky in Mexico, during which the former world Communist leader was said to have offered his cooperation in a battle against "Stalinism."

Dies was described as being deeply impressed by information from other sources to the effect that the Communist Internationale has established a base in Mexico for operation in the United States, Latin and South America.

Dies was said to have received information "from a very high authority" that Soviet Russia seeks to take over Mexico as much as it hopes to take over Finland—except that the penetration is to be accomplished by propaganda, subsidizing of Mexican politicians and other political methods.

Reports were also received by Dies that Mexican organization leaders contacted persons of political influence in the United States before the Mexican government expropriated American oil property in an effort to forestall retaliation.

To Tell Of Break
Trotsky, it was understood, does not plan to give testimony regarding Communist activities in Mexico, but chiefly to detail Communists' efforts to infiltrate their doctrine into the United States while he was in power in Russia. He was said to be anxious to tell the "inside" story of his break with Stalin and his ouster from power despite the fact that he helped found Soviet Russia and was people's commissar for military affairs, in charge of a huge standing army.

The Dies committee investigator who visited Trotsky in his Mexican home, it was learned, was shown scores of documents which have long been considered confidential. Trotsky, Dies committee attaches say, has intimate knowledge of Communist work in the United States, Germany and other nations before his ouster a decade ago.

NEW YORK, Dec. 6 — Fritz Kuhn was to be whisked off to Sing Sing prison today to start serving a 2½ to 5 year term for stealing money from his German-American Bund but his incarceration there will not end the work of state and federal authorities.

If his behavior is good, Kuhn will be eligible for parole in 20 months. On Dec. 13, Judge Wallace will announce what if any action is to be taken against Kuhn's attorney, Peter L. F. Sabatino, whose conduct at the trial brought the threat of a contempt citation.

Because the information was not available, is why we are now naming the business transacted by the local Formers' Fire Mutual at the meeting of the directors here at their office Monday. The officers are Albert Worthington, Grove City, president; Ira Fisher, Ashville, vice president; Jesse L. Baum, Ashville, Secretary-treasurer. The directors, Albert Worthington, Ira Fisher, Lewis Barch, S. E. Beers, Will Sitterly, Frank Valentine, M. G. Steely, W. A. Smalley and Paul Teegardin, Albert Worthington, S. E. Beers and Frank Valentine were elected to succeed themselves as directors for a three-year term. No other business of importance was transacted, so secretary Jesse Baum told us. This Mutual was incorporated under the laws of Ohio on March 4, 1904.

Our Ashville Bank employees when that place was raided by gunmen near three years ago, made a floor dive for the alarm signal and the gang was set going. This worked as it was intended. The stickups made a hurry exit, got into their auto and were gone. PETTENGILL

"The Gentleman from Indiana"

OUR FIRST VENTURE IN SOCIALISM

Now that the nation is safely convalescing from two Thanksgivings, it is appropriate to recall the first one on November 29, 1623, and what the Pilgrim Fathers were thankful for.

It has been forgotten that the 102 pioneers who came over in the Mayflower set up a socialistic commonwealth, somewhat like Brook Farm and New Harmony of grandfather's time, or the Tugwelltowns of today. No one was "to have and to hold" the fruit of his own toil. All was to go into the common store. Those who fished, hunted, farmed, or felled the tall timber were to throw their fish, deer, vegetables and lumber into a single heap from which all might share equally. Under this system, the drone got as much as the worker—or putting it another way, the worker got no more than the drone.

No doubt this in part was due to necessities of their situation.

PETTENGILL—Common perils compelled a common defense and a mutual protection. Other perils today produce somewhat similar socialistic mechanisms, such as the navy or the fire department. But as a means to encourage the production of new wealth, how did the Pilgrims' planned economy succeed?

In 1621 and 1622 they continued to struggle along with immense fortitude but heart-breaking results. But in the third year, 1623, in the words of the old chronicle, "God gave them plenty, and the face of things was changed to the rejoicing of hearts."

In that year they changed from Socialism to a system "in which a stimulus of individual interest quickened the alacrity of toil." To each family was given the use of a separate parcel of land. This "made all hands very industrious so as much more corn was planted than otherwise would have been, and it gave far better content. The women went willingly into the field and took their little ones with them to set the corn, whom to have compelled would have been thought great oppression."

These quaint words record the beginning of a free enterprise in America. And it was that autumn that William Bradford, "Ye Governor of Ye Colony," issued the first Thanksgiving proclamation. He asked the Pilgrims "to gather at ye meethouse on ye hill" and there thank the "Great Father" not only for such natural resources as the game in the forest, and the fish and clams of the sea, but for "an abundant harvest of Indian corn, wheat, peas, beans, squashes and garden vegetables"—all new wealth produced by human effort.

It is noteworthy that our pioneer forebears abandoned 316 years ago the very system to which Socialists, Communists and Fascists are urging us to return to now. They did so not because someone wrote "Das Capital" nor because of a blueprint or diagram drawn in an attic. They did so as the result of bitter experience on a stern and rock-bound coast. They learned from life itself. They learned what we are urged to forget—that the reward of individual toil is the best assurance of enough "plenty" to have a Thanksgiving about.

And by the time gold was discovered in California, in 1849, the thrifty sons and daughters of the Pilgrims in Massachusetts alone, had created a State with no minerals, coal, or petroleum, and with a scanty soil, saved under this system of free enterprise for the profit motive, enough new wealth so that they "could have given a dollar to each individual of the one thousand millions of the inhabitants of the earth, and still have all their schools, meeting-houses, town houses, almshouses, gaols, and literary and benevolent institutions left as nest eggs to begin the world anew."

There is no greater perversion of political terms than that those who believe in the free enterprise system which "changed the face of things" 316 years ago are now called "reactionaries" and those who would now go back to the system the Pilgrims abandoned are now pleased to call themselves "liberals," applying "new remedies to modern needs!" "Give us power" they say, "and we will solve your problems for you."

Well, the promissory notes of the Socialist authoritarians are coming up for protest. With more power than has been entrusted to man in the western world for generations, we have today less stability, less security, less prosperity and less of freedom and the Rights of Man than has been known in centuries.

Despite the glowing promises of these world-shakers, these men of blood and iron, these madmen hearing voices in the air, what is the result of all these tragic years? It is a mirage, a will o' the wisp. "Follow me. Behind the concentration camps of peace

HEALTHIER SAYS RABBIT FEVER OUTBREAK BAD

COLUMBUS, Dec. 6.—With several deaths already reported, Dr. R. O. Markwith, state health director, today branded the present outbreak of tularemia throughout the state as "the worst Ohio has ever experienced."

Emphasizing that reports always were slow in coming through to the health department, Dr. Markwith said a total of 25 cases already had been sent in to the department.

"There may be twice that many throughout the state," he declared, pointing to a report of only three cases in Franklin County, where there are at least six known cases. This, the director said, may indicate 50 or more cases in Ohio.

Of the reported cases, there were four in Knox County, three each in Franklin, Lorain and Delaware, two in Butler and Pickaway, and single cases in Hamilton, Morrow, Ross, Holmes, Lucas, Fairfield, Summit and Erie Counties.

CHURCHILL SAYS NAZIS' U-BOAT WAR COMBATTED

LONDON, Dec. 6 — German submarines are being destroyed "at a rate superior to the German power of replacement," Winston Churchill, first lord of the admiralty, told the House of Commons today.

"Destruction of U-boats continues at the rate of from two to four weekly," Churchill said. The first lord said he believed that five Nazi submarines were sent to the bottom last week alone.

Great Britain has already armed more than 1,000 merchant ships, Churchill said "and 2,000 will be armed before long."

"German's U-boat and mine warfare has proved ineffectual," he said.

"Less than one ship out of every 75 has been sunk in convoy." Churchill ridiculed assertions that the Germans will have 400 U-boats in commission by 1940.

"Perhaps they are producing U-boats and crews on a chain-belt system," he said sarcastically.

GERMAN PLANS TO BREAK BRIT BLOCKADE AIRED

Use Of Mines And Submarine Activity To Be Pushed Against Empire

(Continued from Page One) ... men are hopeful of throttling British trade and creating a situation wherein no ship of any nationality will dare enter or leave British ports.

At some later date, Germany will attempt to launch a "moral blockade" against England throughout the continent of Europe. This campaign will be designed to force neutral nations to "lose their appetite" for trade and commerce with England or risk the dangers inherent in being classified by Germany as "belonging to the enemy camp."

In addition, the time may come when the Reich will decline to allow neutral nations to carry German exports, according to competent quarters.

The semi-official German news agency DNB significantly indicated today that the Reich does not expect the neutrals to rest satisfied on the paper protests they have lodged with Britain against the German export seizure decree.

Neutrals May Object "One might expect the neutrals to resort to self-help," DNB said, "and give their merchant ships active protection."

"It is all the more surprising, therefore, to learn that the Dutch government at present is not contemplating arming its merchantmen or protecting them with convoys."

(Editor's note: The Netherlands government made official announcement to this effect yesterday.)

The attitude of DNB, which reflects the views of the German government, clearly indicated to observers that Germany would soon begin to tighten her arm of the economic pincer as a justified measure against England even if mutual nations suffer thereby.

However, while Germany will attempt to keep her exports moving for the present through neutral countries, informed quarters declared that losses of exports and imports can better be borne by Germany than England.

For years before the war started, it was pointed out, Germany's entire efforts were directed toward centralizing and expanding her domestic production by means of Field Marshal Hermann Wilhelm Goering's four-year plan.

Highway Patrol Takes Up Trail

Two representatives of the Federal Deposit Insurance Department visited the bank Tuesday night to obtain information for the government, bank officials said. This information will be passed on to the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

The loot obtained in the robbery was the largest reported in central Ohio in many years. The four unmasked bandits ordered customers and employees into a rear room, then forced N. E. Reichelderfer, executive vice president, to open the vault.

The only possession Sheriff Charles Radcliff had that belonged to the robbers was a stool that one of the gunmen used to scale the cage at the bank.

Mr. Reichelderfer was almost away from the bank when the robbers appeared. "I had started out the front door," he said, "to get my lunch when I was accosted by the robbers. I saw one was carrying a stool and I was rather pleased that I was getting away from some salesmen. But when one of the fellows pushed a gun against my side and told me to get back into the bank I didn't feel so happy." The banker didn't name the hour that he finally got to his lunch.

So the justice department asked the coast guard to tow the Lekala to port, and the matter was again placed in the hands of a United States attorney—this time the U. S. attorney in North Carolina. "We saw no point in letting this thing develop into a big 'mystery'," said a government official in disclosing the facts of the Lekala case. "As far as we can find out, this is the true story. It was just a group of German sailors trying to get home again."

ITALY PRESSES NAZI TO HALT RUSS ATTACKS

North of Lake Ladoga, the Finns withdrew from Salmijervi into forests and marshes, where the swift Finnish ski units took a heavy toll of the advancing Russians.

On the Karelian front, Russian mechanized troops and tanks opened a monster attack on the Finnish lines, but the tanks plumped into snow-covered tank traps and turned over directly in front of anti-tank guns. Finnish shells made short work of the Soviet tank crews. The entire attack was halted in its tracks. The Finns suffered only slight losses while the Russians lost large number of tanks.

Finnish losses since the hostilities began have been "very small," the military command announced.

Finnish authorities claimed that the Soviet air force had been held on the ground by "bad weather," but it appeared that this factor did not seriously affect Finnish planes.

The city, at present, is said to face a shortage of funds. Agriculture department officials pointed out that if the city lacks funds for relief it could not support the food stamp plan.

If the plans is started in Akron, it will be the 25th city in which the Federal Suplus Commodities Corporation will route surplus commodities to the low income group through retail channels.

CHURCHILL SAYS NAZIS' U-BOAT WAR COMBATTED

LONDON, Dec. 6 — German submarines are being destroyed "at a rate superior to the German power of replacement," Winston Churchill, first lord of the admiralty, told the House of Commons today.

"Destruction of U-boats continues at the rate of from two to four weekly," Churchill said.

The first lord said he believed that five Nazi submarines were sent to the bottom last week alone.

Great Britain has already armed more than 1,000 merchant ships, Churchill said "and 2,000 will be armed before long."

"German's U-boat and mine warfare has proved ineffectual," he said.

"Less than one ship out of every 75 has been sunk in convoy."

Churchill ridiculed assertions that the Germans will have 400 U-boats in commission by 1940.

"Perhaps they are producing U-boats and crews on a chain-belt system," he said sarcastically.

GERMAN PLANS TO BREAK BRIT BLOCKADE AIRED

Use Of Mines And Submarine Activity To Be Pushed Against Empire

mans are hopeful of throttling British trade and creating a situation wherein no ship of any nationality will dare enter or leave British ports.

At some later date, Germany will attempt to launch a "moral blockade" against England throughout the continent of Europe. This campaign will be designed to force neutral nations to "lose their appetite" for trade and commerce with England or risk the dangers inherent in being classified by Germany as "belonging to the enemy camp."

In addition, the time may come when the Reich will decline to allow neutral nations to carry German exports, according to competent quarters.

The semi-official German news agency DNB significantly indicated today that the Reich does not expect the neutrals to rest satisfied on the paper protests they have lodged with Britain against the German export seizure decree.

Neutrals May Object
"One might expect the neutrals to resort to self-help," DNB said, "and give their merchant ships active protection."

"It is all the more surprising, therefore, to learn that the Dutch government at present is not contemplating arming its merchantmen or protecting them with convoys."

(Editor's note: The Netherlands government made official announcement to this effect yesterday.)

The attitude of DNB, which reflects the views of the German government, clearly indicated to observers that Germany would soon begin to tighten her arm of the economic pincer as a justified measure against England even if mutual nations suffer thereby.

However, while Germany will attempt to keep her exports moving for the present through neutral countries, informed quarters declared that losses of exports and imports can better be borne by Germany than England.

For years before the war started, it was pointed out, Germany's entire efforts were directed toward centralizing and expanding her domestic production by means of Field Marshal Hermann Wilhelm Goering's four-year plan.

Two representatives of the Federal Deposit Insurance Department visited the bank Tuesday night to obtain information for the government, bank officials said. This information will be passed on to the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

The loot obtained in the robbery was the largest reported in central Ohio in many years. The four unmasked bandits ordered customers and employees into a rear room then forced N. E. Reichelderfer, executive vice president, to open the vault.

The only possession Sheriff Charles Radcliff had that belonged to the robbers was a stool that one of the gunmen used to scale the cage at the bank.

Mr. Reichelderfer was almost away from the bank when the robbers appeared. "I had started out the front door," he said, "to get my lunch when I was accosted by the robbers. I saw one was carrying a stool and I was rather pleased that I was getting away from some salesmen. But when one of the fellows pushed a gun against my side and told me to get back into the bank I didn't feel so happy." The banker didn't name the hour that he finally got to his lunch.

MIGHTY GERMAN WARSHIP GOES WITH DEUTSCHLAND

PARIS, Dec. 6—One of Germany's most formidable battle-ships, the 26,000-ton Scharnhorst, ranges the sea with the 35,000-ton pocket battleship Deutschland. It was revealed for the first time today by Vice Admiral Cecil Vivian Osborne of Britain.

"They can cause considerable damage before they are sunk," Admiral Osborne admitted in a speech before the Anglo-American press in Paris.

Admiral Osborne, who is a member of the British Board of War Censors, predicted a long war. Mines, submarines, and raiders must be eliminated before Britain's blockade will be perfected, he said.

the investigation. After ten days Cahill decided the Lekala could not be held and the ship sailed southward.

Yesterday the coast guard reported presence of the Lekala off North Carolina and the matter was called to the attention of the justice department. The department was reminded of the statute which requires placing of a bond by vessels or individuals leaving the United States to contact a belligerent ship.

So the justice department asked the coast guard to tow the Lekala to port, and the matter was again placed in the hands of a United States attorney—this time the U. S. attorney in North Carolina.

"We saw no point in letting this thing develop into a big 'mystery,'" said a government official in disclosing the facts of the Lekala case. "As far as we can find out, this is the true story. It was just a group of German sailors trying to get home again."

ground detachments were killed or dispersed.

North of Lake Ladoga, the Finns withdrew from Salmijervi into forests and marshes, where the swift Finnish ski units took a heavy toll of the advancing Russians.

On the Karelian front, Russian mechanized troops and tanks opened a monster attack on the Finnish lines, but the tanks plumped into snow-covered tank traps and turned over directly in front of anti-tank guns. Finnish shells made short work of the Soviet tank crews. The entire attack was halted in its tracks. The Finns suffered only slight losses while the Russians lost large numbers of tanks.

Finnish losses since the hostilities began have been "very small," the military command announced.

Finnish authorities claimed that the Soviet air force had been held on the ground by "bad weather," but it appeared that this factor did not seriously affect Finnish planes.

AKRON, O., SEEKS TO START FOOD STAMP PROGRAM

WASHINGTON, Dec. 6—The administration's food stamp plan will be started in Akron, O., in six weeks if the city will have sufficient funds for relief in 1940, Secretary of Agriculture Wallace announced today.

The city, at present, is said to face a shortage of funds. Agriculture department officials pointed out that if the city lacks funds for relief it could not support the food stamp plan.

If the plans are started in Akron, it will be the 25th city in which the Federal Surplus Commodities Corporation will route surplus commodities to the low income group through retail channels.

QUIZZED AND QUIZZING

PUBLISHERS of reference works are enjoying lively business these days. The public has a boundless zest for encyclopedias, dictionaries, and so on. But they do not attribute increasing sales of such works simply to the desire to know more.

Readers want reference works to help them answer quiz-bee posers or dig out obscure facts to use in framing difficult questions. The world, says a commentator, seems to be divided into two groups, those asking trick questions and those hopefully trying to answer them.

It seems too bad to stop with that observation. Is there some profound social or philosophical cause for this craze? Are there so many things in life today for which no one has an answer, ready or remote, that people cling to questions for which answers are available?

It would be very fine if all this search of the textbooks and reference works resulted in a public so well informed and intelligent that it would produce the answers to our as yet unsolved social and economic problems. But those answers apparently must come from thinking, not from books of facts, and that's another story.

COLLEGE MEN AVIATORS

THE air service is the most popular branch of the United States' military establishment among college graduates. Enlistment records show that men joining the army today from that group ask for air training. They also seem to yearn for foreign service and as distant a post as possible.

There may be a number of reasons behind these preferences. Patriotism and glamor make an appealing combination, and all aviation is still new enough to seem romantic to youth.

Enlistment in the air service, or any other branch, means a job and experience and a living. Many college men, blocked in other lines, believe that enlistment will be the beginning of a career and advancement, with the added advantage of immediate travel. The current increase in army strength opens the way for more non-commissioned officers from corporal to master-sergeant, making promotion more rapid than under former conditions.

Few of the young college men now enlisting really expect to go to war, but current unrest throughout the world increases pride in our own defense forces and enthusiasm for joining them.

Now every kid will probably want a Byrd snow cruiser with wheels and balloon tires, instead of a sled.

WORLD AT A GLANCE

INTERVIEWED the other day, Senator Carter Glass of Virginia refused to express himself relative to a Rooseveltian third nomination, on the ground that he didn't want to "create party friction." But he did say, "I know of no men better qualified for the presidency than Harry F. Byrd or John N. Garner."

Politicians take this as implying that, in the old Virginian's opinion, either Byrd or Garner would be at least as good a Democratic candidate as F. D., among other possible selections.

Furthermore, it generally is recognized that a third-term aspirant would be somewhat handicapped by the very fact of his third-term-ness. It's a handicap which wouldn't afflict Byrd or Garner. Therefore, the general interpretation is that, by indirection, Senator Glass was saying that Byrd, Garner or some alternative old-line Democrat would be even better than F. D.

In other words, assume that Roosevelt, Byrd and Garner are on a par. But there's something to be subtracted from Roosevelt's par; nothing to be subtracted from Byrd's or Garner's. That apparently is Senator Glass' reasoning.

AS TO PARTY FRICTION?

Yes, as to "party friction"? Senator Glass might have meant that he didn't want to create any of it by declaring himself in favor of a third term. However, all hands know that that was what he didn't want to declare himself for, anyway.

These Bourbon Democrats are queer folk.

I used to think they were free traders. One day I had a chat with Senator Glass and made a remark suggesting that that was my impression.

"Why, how you talk!" he exclaimed angrily (he's a tart conversationalist). "You must be a Henry George-ite." Well, darned if I hadn't thought that Henry Georgeism was sound Jeffersonian Democratic doctrine. "Nah," rejoined the senator contemptuously. "Nobody believes that hokey any longer."

There are a few statesmen who still do believe in free trade, though.

Daily Washington Merry-Go-Round

BY DREW PEARSON AND ROBERT S. ALLEN,

BALKANS CAN'T BLUFF STALIN

WASHINGTON—Best diplomatic information from Moscow indicates that the sudden attack on Finland was motivated primarily by the situation in the Balkans—especially Roumania.

Secretly Roumania is a more important Russian objective than Finland. And while Finland is a long way off, and ostensibly there is little connection between them, actually the manner in which Finland had stalled off Moscow was causing loss of prestige in the Balkans. In other words, Roumania was wondering whether Russia really meant business, and whether she in turn, couldn't out-manuever Stalin just as Finland seemed to be doing.

This loss of prestige was what finally induced Stalin to act, according to intelligence reports coming out of Moscow. Apparently, he figured that it was better to make such a vigorous example of Finland that Roumania and other Balkan objectives would yield without war.

One group in the Soviet inner circle wanted to wait until Communist agitation inside Finland was so active that the country could be shaken into the Russian lap like a ripe plum, without a struggle. This policy was being pursued. But Stalin got impatient and decided that the Balkan program would have to be speeded up.

FINNISH NOTES

Reason the Swedes, despite neighborly distress, don't do something to help Finland, is fear of Germany. Hitler long has had his eyes on Sweden's famous iron mines, and would like nothing better than an excuse to move in on them.

The British, as usual, were wrong about Russia. Up until the last minute they were convinced Stalin would not move in on Finland. Our State Department, relying upon British information, thought so too.

GOVERNMENT ECONOMY

Earnest, economy-minded Henry Morgenthau insists that all members of his Treasury Department use his Coast Guard radio in sending government telegrams. However, Henry's economy on a recent $3.24 telegram will cost the Government just about $2,000,000.

All this happened when Roosevelt removed the quotas on sugar, thereby increasing the tariff from ninety cents to $1.50. The announcement was carefully timed for late in the afternoon, when all customs offices would be closed, so no one could rush sugar through some uninformed customs house at the old 90 cent tariff.

By next morning, the Treasury figured, all sugar importers and all custom houses would know of the tariff increases, and it would be applied uniformly. However, Secretary Morgenthau's economy upset this plan. For the telegram from Washington to New York, sent by Coast Guard radio on the afternoon of Sept. 11 did not reach the Customs House in New York until around noon Sept. 12.

The Coast Guard now blames naval radio for the delay. The Navy handles all Coast Guard messages, and apparently the Navy didn't think the message urgent, so put a lot of routine naval messages ahead of it. Anyway, the telegram took about 16 hours getting to New York.

Meanwhile the Collector of Customs in New York, having read about the tariff (Continued on Page Ten)

Avoiding Colds From the Bath

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

Does a hot bath in the morning conduce to catching cold?

Probably not, although we can't help feeling that there is some relation between temperature and colds as expressed in the phrase "catching cold."

One of my doctor friends thinks that the usual method of drawing a bath is not only inefficient but also a cold-breeder. Most people allow very hot water to enter the tub, and when the water reaches a certain level, cold is added so as to make it bearable. As a result of this, the air in the bathroom rises in temperature, the bather becomes overheated and becomes more so as a result of the bath. After the bath he remains in the small, overheated bathroom, and when he comes into the outer air, he experiences a sense of chilling. The proper way to run a bath, according to this authority, is to allow the cold water to flow into the tub until the desired level is reached, and then shut it off. Then turn on the hot water and mix it thoroughly with the cold water, using one's hands. When the desired temperature is reached, close off the hot water. In this way the temperature of the room is not unduly raised, nor does it become humid. The pleasure of the bath is increased many times. The most satisfactory temperature for a morning bath is about 90 or 95°.

Dr. Clendening will answer questions of general interest only, and then only through his column.

Rules for

Proper Lighting

What are the rules for proper illumination for reading?

Efficient lighting depends upon the factors of time, contrast and the size of print, but the most important thing is the actual gross amount of illumination.

Summer sunlight gives about 10,000 footcandles. Outdoors, on a clear day, the illumination is from 1,500 to 2,500 footcandles and in the shade about 500. Sunlight is, of course, too strong for reading, but the other figures quoted are tolerated very comfortably. The shortest time in which it is possible to gain an adequate visual impression is 0.07 second. With poor lighting four times as much time is required. Letter sorting in post offices does not reach its maximum speed until the illumination surpasses eight to 10 footcandles. Magazine print is read 30 per cent faster when the illumination is increased from two to 24 footcandles.

The paper on which letters are printed cannot be too bright. If you had pure white paper, which is a scientific curiosity, it would reflect a brightness of 100. The newspaper which you are reading has a brightness of 80 for the paper and three for the ink. The contrast, which is ratio between the brightness of the ink and the brightness of the background, is about 96 per cent. In an ordinary telephone directory the brightness of the low grade paper is 57 and the contrast is about 80 per cent. This makes vision more difficult.

With 0.1 footcandle, six point type on good paper can just be discerned; three footcandles would be required for protracted reading. Electrical engineers think that the brilliance in auditoriums should be five footcandles; in trains, six; churches and hotel lobbies, eight; banks, 10; reading rooms, 12; barber shops, 15 and art galleries, 20. The electric light bulb in the average American home is about seven cents a day. If the same amount of light were obtained from candles, the cost would be 50 times as expensive.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Constant Reader: "(1) How long does solid food remain in the stomach? (2) Should salt be excluded from the tuberculosis diet? (3) What value has potato juice separated from the starch?"

Answer: (1) A mixed meal remains in the stomach for about six hours. Water leaves the stomach almost immediately; starches and sugars very rapidly if taken without other food; proteins remain about three hours; fat remains the longest—from six to eight hours. (2) Salt is not excluded from the tuberculosis diet. (3) Potato juice acts as a preventive of scurvy.

SYNOPSIS

THE CHARACTERS:
FABIENNE SEYMOUR, rich, young and beautiful.
NICKY BARTLETT, wealthy and in love with Fabienne.
ELLEN CHAPMAN, young and capable mistress of Willoughby house.
DR. BILL MALLORY, close friend of Ellen's.
YESTERDAY: Bill takes Fabienne to her hotel, after they had trimmed Ellen's Christmas tree, and his good-night kiss, on her cheek, surprises and disturbs her.

CHAPTER SEVENTEEN
CHRISTMAS day dawned cold and clear. At noon, when Fabienne Seymour awoke, the sun had melted the night's snow and splashed in broad golden beams into the bedroom where she lay.

In the first few moments of waking it seemed like any other day. Then her eye fell on the unopened packages in their bright wrappings and she realized that it was Christmas and she was all alone. Because she had never before been sorry for herself, she did not recognize the emotion that came over her.

Scampering across the floor to gather up those parcels and bring them back to her bed for opening, she had little interest for what she was doing. Even the sight of the handsome gifts—frocks from Gertrude in Paris, gloves and lingerie from the same source with the twins' names childishly scrawled on cards from Switzerland, a brocade evening bag from Dick, and a litter of small gifts from friends in New York—could not lift her from her depression.

She ordered breakfast and dressed hastily, trying on the frocks. One was a lovely thing, a froth of tulle the same pale gold as her hair. She was taking it off when the telephone rang the first time.

"Darling, it's Camilla," the voice said. "Whatever are you doing in New York? . . . and without waiting for an answer, 'Ned saw you at midnight mass and I took a chance on calling you. . . . We're having a small party tonight. I want you to come in.'"

Fabienne looked at the golden gown and her spirits went up. "I'd love to," she said promptly.

"Do you want to come alone? Or will I have Ken Hemingway call for you?"

"I'll come alone," Fabienne said. The party wasn't until late evening and the whole blank day stretched ahead of her, but now it didn't seem interminable.

The telephone rang again. It was Ellen to ask her for Christmas dinner.

Fabienne hesitated, thought of the things she wanted to remember from the night before, and declined with thanks. It would be better to be alone.

But what does a girl do when she is all alone on Christmas day? Fabienne dressed in her smartest suit, slipped a silver fox cape over it, tilted a dazzling hat over her brow, pinned on the corsage that Uncle Mark had wired to her, and ordered her car.

She was going to Willoughby house.

She parked the car a block away and let herself in the big front door. Contrary to what she had expected, no voices echoed through the halls. There was only Miss Porter there and two very old men, who dozed in the reading room.

All the world stayed at home on Christmas Day.

Fabienne went up to the office where she had left her work. Work was a panacea for loneliness.

She took off her hat and threw it on a chair with her fur cape. Then she sat down at her desk and took a folder of papers from the drawer. The letter from Anita Cheeseborough, which announced that she planned a gift of fifteen hundred dollars to the settlement house, lay on top of all the rest.

Fabienne put it aside. Ellen had told her that it was use would rest in Fabienne's hands. She had plenty of time today to consider it and she meant to.

"Hello, Miss Seymour!" Surprised, Fabienne looked up to see little Rose Riccio standing in the office doorway.

"Hello, Rose, Merry Christmas! And what are you doing here today?"

Rose's eyes were rimmed with red. "The old man's raising hell, so I got out," she said with simple candor.

"Oh!" Shocked, Fabienne was unable to offer any comfort.

"So if there's anything I can do to help you, I'd be glad to. I ain't got anything else to do."

Acting on impulse, "Fabienne said, 'You can keep me company, Rose. Have you had your Christmas dinner?'"

Rose gave her an eloquent glance and shook her head.

"Would you like to have it with me?"

"But—but—" Rose turned bright pink with pleasure.

"Come on, Rose. Get your hat. We'll go to a movie and then we'll have a real dinner with turkey and plum pudding and . . . and conversation."

The movie and the dinner, handsomely served in Fabienne's apartment, were a great success. Conversation was not so easily achieved, however. Rose, in the presence of unfamiliar surroundings, was stricken dumb with admiration and social embarrassment.

In an effort to find a common ground for talk, Fabienne said, "Rose, I want to ask you for some advice. We're going to have a gift of a few hundred dollars to spend at the house. We want to do something for young people like yourself. For both boys and girls. We thought of putting a removable dance floor over the cement floor in the gymnasium. What do you think of the idea?"

Rose's coal black eyes danced. "You know what I think, Miss Seymour? It would be swell if we had a real little theater! Not just the auditorium. But a place where we could have real shows and dramatic clubs and things like that. Any way, the gym is too small to make much of a dance floor and it ain't cosy there. But if you had a theater and could take seats out? Gee, a lot of the kids in our neighborhood would like to be actors. You know real prize fighters and real artists started from classes and if we had . . ."

Fabienne's enthusiasm took fire at once. "Rose, you may have a wonderful idea there! And tonight I'm going to see what can be done about it. You're a bright little girl." Ken Hemingway would be at Camilla's party and Ken was an architect.

Ken would be delighted to go down to Willoughby house the next morning and give her an estimate after looking over the layout, he told her when she explained her idea.

There were four rooms on the top floor that would make an ideal little theater. They could knock out walls—

Ellen joined Fabienne and Ken in their enthusiastic exploration. "It would cost about two thousand," Ken estimated.

"We could make up the extra five hundred somehow," Fabienne promised. "We're getting fifteen hundred. How soon could we begin?"

Two days later, when Ken brought hastily drawn plans down to Willoughby house, Ellen had to tell them that they could not manage it. Mrs. Cheeseborough was very sorry, but she found that she would have to postpone her gift for an indefinite time.

Apologetically, Fabienne told sixteen-year-old Rose that their fine plan had fallen through.

Rose was to play a more important part in her life than she realized. The girl was a living symbol of the responsibility that Fabienne had taken on, for all that she thought that she could give only what and when she wished to give. The high-spirited girl who had gone to work in a settlement house to pay off her resentment toward her mother was developing into a woman who could never again consider herself apart from her fellow human beings. Their troubles were to be forever after her own.

She knew it the night that she went out with Drusilla and Tommy Ryan.

"Let's go see jitter-bugs!" Drusilla proposed after a dull movie. "There's a cheap dance hall over in the Fifties they say is a real dive. Shall we?"

It sounded amusing. Fabienne thought it was until she saw Rose Riccio, with a highball in her hand, sitting between two Filipino boys. She went directly to the table where the girl sat and said, "Rose, go home. You don't belong here."

Rose's cheeks were bright and her eyes were defiant. "Beat it," she said thickly. "Go home where you belong, Mrs. Silver Foxes! I gotta have some fun, don't I? It's my own business what I do. ain't it? This is no settlement house, I do what I like here. Scram."

QUIZZED AND QUIZZING

PUBLISHERS of reference works are enjoying lively business these days. The public has a boundless zest for encyclopedias, dictionaries, and so on. But they do not attribute increasing sales of such works simply to the desire to know more.

Readers want reference works to help them answer quiz-bee posers or dig out obscure facts to use in framing difficult questions. The world, says a commentator, seems to be divided into two groups, those asking trick questions and those hopefully trying to answer them.

It seems too bad to stop with that observation. Is there some profound social or philosophical cause for this craze? Are there so many things in life today for which no one has an answer, ready or remote, that people cling to questions for which answers are available?

It would be very fine if all this search of the textbooks and reference works resulted in a public so well informed and intelligent that it would produce the answers to our as yet unsolved social and economic problems. But those answers apparently must come from thinking, not from books of facts, and that's another story.

COLLEGE MEN AVIATORS

THE air service is the most popular branch of the United States' military establishment among college graduates. Enlistment records show that men joining the army today from that group ask for air training. They also seem to yearn for foreign service and as distant a post as possible.

There may be a number of reasons behind these preferences. Patriotism and glamor make an appealing combination, and all aviation is still new enough to seem romantic to youth.

Enlistment in the air service, or any other branch, means a job and experience and a living. Many college men, blocked in other lines, believe that enlistment will be the beginning of a career and advancement, with the added advantage of immediate travel. The current increase in army strength opens the way for more non-commissioned officers from corporal to master-sergeant, making promotion more rapid than under former conditions.

Few of the young college men now enlisting really expect to go to war, but current unrest throughout the world increases pride in our own defense forces and enthusiasm for joining them.

Now every kid will probably want a Byrd snow cruiser with wheels and balloon tires, instead of a sled.

WORLD AT A GLANCE

—By— Charles F. Stewart

INTERVIEWED the other day, Senator Carter Glass of Virginia refused to express himself relative to a Rooseveltian third nomination, on the ground that he didn't want to "create party friction." But he did say, "I know of no men better qualified for the presidency than Harry F. Byrd or John N. Garner."

Politicians take this as implying that, in the old Virginian's opinion, either Byrd or Garner would be at least as good a Democratic candidate as F. D., among other possible selections.

Furthermore, it generally is recognized that a third-term aspirant would be somewhat handicapped by the very fact of his third-term-ness. It's a handicap which wouldn't afflict Byrd or Garner. Therefore, the general interpretation is that, by indirection, Senator Glass was saying that Byrd, Garner or some alternative old-line Democrat would be even better than F. D.

In other words, assume that Roosevelt, Byrd and Garner are on a par. But there's something to be subtracted from Roosevelt's par; nothing to be subtracted from Byrd's or Garner's. That apparently is Senator Glass' reasoning.

AS TO PARTY FRICTION?

Yes, as to "party friction"? Senator Glass might have meant that he didn't want to create any of it by declaring himself in favor of a third term. However, all hands know that that was what he didn't want to declare himself for, anyway.

These Bourbon Democrats are queer folk.

I used to think they were free traders. One day I had a chat with Senator Glass and made a remark suggesting that that was my impression.

"Why, how you talk!" he exclaimed angrily (he's a tart conversationalist). "You must be a Henry George-ite." Well, darned if I hadn't thought that Henry Georgeism was sound Jeffersonian Democratic doctrine. "Nah," rejoined the senator contemptuously. "Nobody believes that hokey any longer."

There are a few statesmen who still do believe in free trade, though. Secretary of State Hull is one

Daily Washington Merry-Go-Round

BY DREW PEARSON AND ROBERT S. ALLEN,

BALKANS CAN'T BLUFF STALIN

WASHINGTON—Best diplomatic information from Moscow indicates that the sudden attack on Finland was motivated primarily by the situation in the Balkans—especially Roumania.

Secretly Roumania is a more important Russian objective than Finland. And while Finland is a long way off, and ostensibly there is little connection between them, actually the manner in which Finland had stalled off Moscow was causing loss of prestige in the Balkans. In other words, Roumania was wondering whether Russia really meant business, and whether she in turn, couldn't out-manuever Stalin just as Finland seemed to be doing.

This loss of prestige was what finally induced Stalin to act, according to intelligence reports coming out of Moscow. Apparently, he figured that it was better to make such a vigorous example of Finland that Roumania and other Balkan objectives would yield without war.

One group in the Soviet inner circle wanted to wait until Communist agitation inside Finland was so active that the country could be shaken into the Russian lap like a ripe plum, without a struggle. This policy was being pursued. But Stalin got impatient and decided that the Balkan program would have to be speeded up.

FINNISH NOTES

Reason the Swedes, despite neighborly distress, don't do something to help Finland, is fear of Germany. Hitler long has had his eyes on Sweden's famous iron mines, and would like nothing better than an excuse to move in on them.

The British, as usual, were wrong about Russia. Up until the last minute they were convinced Stalin would not move in on Finland. Our State Department, relying upon British information, thought so too.

GOVERNMENT ECONOMY

Earnest, economy-minded Henry Morgenthau insists that all members of his Treasury Department use his Coast Guard radio in sending government telegrams. However, Henry's economy on a recent $3.24 telegram will cost the Government just about $2,000,000.

All this happened when Roosevelt removed the quotas on sugar, thereby increasing the tariff from ninety cents to $1.50. The announcement was carefully timed for late in the afternoon, when all customs offices would be closed, so no one could rush sugar through some uninformed customs house at the old 90 cent tariff.

By next morning, the Treasury figured, all sugar importers and all custom houses would know of the tariff increases, and it would be applied uniformly. However, Secretary Morgenthau's economy upset this plan. For the telegram from Washington to New York, sent by Coast Guard radio on the afternoon of Sept. 11 did not reach the Customs House in New York until around noon Sept. 12.

The Coast Guard now blames naval radio for the delay. The Navy handles all Coast Guard messages, and apparently the Navy didn't think the message urgent, so put a lot of routine naval messages ahead of it. Anyway, the telegram took about 16 hours getting to New York.

Meanwhile the Collector of Customs in New York, having read about the tariff (Continued on Page Ten)

Avoiding Colds From the Bath

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

Does a hot bath in the morning conduce to catching cold?

Probably not, although we can't help feeling that there is some relation between temperature and colds as expressed in the phrase "catching cold."

One of my doctor friends thinks that the usual method of drawing a bath is not only inefficient but also a cold-breeder. Most people allow very hot water to enter the tub, and when the water reaches a certain level, cold is added so as to make it bearable. As a result of this, the air in the bathroom rises in temperature, the bather becomes overheated and becomes more so as a result of the bath. After the bath he remains in the small, overheated bathroom, and when he comes into the outer air, he experiences a sense of chilling. The proper way to run a bath, according to this authority, is to allow the cold water to flow into the tub until the desired level is reached, and then shut it off. Then turn on the hot water and mix it thoroughly with the cold water, using one's hands. When the desired temperature is reached, close off the hot water. In this way the temperature of the room is not unduly raised, nor does it become humid. The pleasure of the bath is increased many times. The most satisfactory temperature for a morning bath is about 90 or 95°.

Dr. Clendening will answer questions of general interest only, and then only through his column.

Rules for Proper Lighting

What are the rules for proper illumination for reading?

Efficient lighting depends upon the factors of time, contrast and the size of print, but the most important thing is the actual gross amount of illumination.

Summer sunlight gives about 10,000 footcandles. Outdoors, on a clear day, the illumination is from 1,500 to 2,500 footcandles and in the shade about 500. Sunlight is, of course, too strong for reading, but the other figures quoted are tolerated very comfortably. The shortest time in which it is possible to gain an adequate visual impression is 0.07 second. With poor lighting four times as much time is required. Letter sorting in post offices does not reach its maximum speed until the illumination surpasses eight to 10 footcandles. Magazine print is read 30 per cent faster when the illumination is increased from two to 24 footcandles.

The paper on which letters are printed cannot be too bright. If you had pure white paper, which is a scientific curiosity, it would reflect a brightness of 100. The newspaper which you are reading has a brightness of 80 for the paper and three for the ink. The contrast, which is ratio between the brightness of the ink and the brightness of the background, is about 96 per cent. In an ordinary telephone directory the brightness of the low grade paper is 57 and the contrast is about 80 per cent. This makes vision more difficult.

With 0.1 footcandle, six point type on good paper can just be discerned; three footcandles would be required for protracted reading. Electrical engineers think that the brilliance in auditoriums should be five footcandles; in trains, six; churches and hotel lobbies, eight; banks, 10; reading rooms, 12; barber shops, 15 and art galleries, 20. The electric light bill in the average American home is about seven cents a day. If the same amount of light were obtained from candles, the cost would be 50 times as expensive.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Constant Reader: "(1) How long does solid food remain in the stomach? (2) Should salt be excluded from the tuberculosis diet? (3) What value has potato juice separated from the starch?"

Answer: (1) A mixed meal remains in the stomach for about six hours. Water leaves the stomach almost immediately; starches and sugars very rapidly if taken without other food; proteins remain about three hours; fat remains the longest—from six to eight hours. (2) Salt is not excluded from the tuberculosis diet. (3) Potato juice acts as a preventive of scurvy.

SYNOPSIS

THE CHARACTERS:
FABIENNE SEYMOUR, rich, young and beautiful.
NICKY BARTLETT, wealthy and in love with Fabienne.
ELLEN CHAPMAN, young and capable mistress of Willowoughby house.
DR. BILL MALLORY, close friend of Ellen's.

YESTERDAY: Bill takes Fabienne to her hotel, after they had trimmed Ellen's Christmas tree, and his good-night kiss, on her cheek, surprises and disturbs her.

CHAPTER SEVENTEEN

CHRISTMAS day dawned cold and clear. At noon, when Fabienne Seymour awoke, the sun had melted the night's snow and splashed in broad golden beams into the bedroom where she lay.

In the first few moments of waking it seemed like any other day. Then her eye fell on the unopened packages in their bright wrappings and she realized that it was Christmas and she was all alone. Because she had never before been sorry for herself, she did not recognize the emotion that came over her.

Scampering across the floor to gather up those parcels and bring them back to her bed for opening, she had little interest for what she was doing. Even the sight of the handsome glass—brooch from Gertrude in Paris, gloves and lingerie from the same source with the twins' names childishly scrawled on cards from Switzerland, a brocade evening bag from Dick, and a litter of small gifts from friends in New York—could not lift her from her depression.

Papers On Christmas Read For Child League

Conservation Unit Makes Reports Of Play

The Child Conservation League met Tuesday in the home of Mrs. Theodore Huston of Stoutsville, Mrs. Robert Musser and Mrs. Karl Mason reading timely papers in connection with Christmas. Final reports of the play, "Aladdin and His Wonderful Lamp", sponsored recently by the group, were received. Future projects were discussed and arrangements were made for the Christmas party.

Mrs. Musser spoke first, her subject being "Give Santa Claus His Day." She discussed the different ways parents answer the question that is always put to them by their children, "Is there a Santa Claus?"

Some parents believe that it is wrong to deceive their children in any way and so tell them the truth, but according to Mrs. Musser this robs children of all the glory and sparkle of the day.

It is better to link the Santa Claus idea with the fairy idea, she said. It explains his ability to be every place, all over the world in the same night.

Mrs. Musser suggested that it is well to emphasize the real meaning of Christmas and the true spirit of Santa Claus. We can only imagine a Santa Claus that is kind and forgiving.

In this day, children need more than facts. There is a need to return to old-fashioned ways with new fashioned ease.

Mrs. Musser concluded by reading an article published in the New York Times last Christmas Day.

Mrs. Mason presented a paper, "Toys Old and New." She described early toys of other countries and discussed the history of dolls, their costumes and significance. As early as the sixteenth century a Toy Makers' Guild had been established in Nuremberg. She mentioned that our national toy industry amounts to $230,000,000 annually.

Mrs. Mason spoke of toys as tools of play as well as being of educational value. Each child should have a place especially for his toys and should be taught to feel a responsibility for keeping them there. He should be taught to play with one toy at a time.

Children should be given something to love, if not a doll, some toy, dog or other animal.

Mrs. Mason gave a list of toys suitable to different age groups. She concluded by saying if a child could have only one toy, it should be a good set of blocks. Psychologists agree that a set of blocks is the best single toy to possess and secondly, dolls. Mrs. Mason had with her an excellent display of toys.

Miss Margaret Rooney will be guest speaker at the Friday session of Washington Grange, telling interesting details of her summer trip to England.

Westminster Bible Class
About 30 members and guests attended the meeting of the Westminster Bible Class of the Presbyterian Church Tuesday at the home of Mrs. Marvin Steele, Washington Township. An interesting feature of the evening's entertainment was the delightful talk on "Virginia Gardens" by Mrs. Richard Jones.

Mrs. Orin W. Dreisbach, assisted by her daughter, decorated a small Christmas tree telling a pleasing running story of the meaning of the symbols used.

The annual exchange of gifts was included in the plans for the affair. Refreshments, appropriate to the approaching holiday season, were served by Mrs. Steele assisted by Miss Ethel Kiger, Mrs. Dreisbach, Mrs. Leslie D. May and Mrs. Sterley Croman.

STARS SAY—
For Wednesday, December 6 JUDGING by the adverse lunar aspects of this day, there may be difficulties, stubborn obstacles, delays or postponements, to be met with patience, determination and sound sense. The latter may be supplemented by a quickened intuition or perhaps a sudden "hunch," which may help break up a static or critical situation. The advice of superiors may likewise prove profitable.

Those whose birthday it is are on the brink of a year in which they must exercise resolution, perseverance and sagacity in order to vanquish difficult, trying and obstinate situations. Congestions and impediments call for decisive handling.

A child born on this day may have certain handicaps in its early life, but these impediments may be vanquished by patience, fortitude and determination. Its superiors may co-operate.

Papers On Christmas Read For Child League

Conservation Unit Makes Reports Of Play

The Child Conservation League met Tuesday in the home of Mrs. Theodore Huston of Stoutsville, Mrs. Robert Musser and Mrs. Karl Mason reading timely papers in connection with Christmas. Final reports of the play, "Aladdin and His Wonderful Lamp", sponsored recently by the group, were received. Future projects were discussed and arrangements were made for the Christmas party.

Mrs. Musser spoke first, her subject being "Give Santa Claus His Day." She discussed the different ways parents answer the question that is always put to them by their children, "Is there a Santa Claus?"

Some parents believe that it is wrong to deceive their children in any way and so tell them the truth, but according to Mrs. Musser this robs children of all the glory and sparkle of the day.

It is better to link the Santa Claus idea with the fairy idea, she said. It explains his ability to be every place, all over the world in the same night.

Mrs. Musser suggested that it is well to emphasize the real meaning of Christmas and the true spirit of Santa Claus. We can only imagine a Santa Claus that is kind and forgiving.

In this day, children need more than facts. There is a need to return to old-fashioned ways with new fashioned ease.

Mrs. Musser concluded by reading an article published in the New York Times last Christmas Day.

Mrs. Mason presented a paper, "Toys Old and New". She described early toys of other countries and discussed the history of dolls, their costumes and significance. As early as the sixteenth century a Toy Makers' Guild had been established in Nuremberg. She mentioned that our national toy industry amounts to $230,000,000 annually.

Mrs. Mason spoke of toys as tools of play as well as being of educational value. Each child should have a place especially for his toys and should be taught to feel a responsibility for keeping them there. He should be taught to play with one toy at a time.

Children should be given something to love, if not a doll, some toy, dog or other animal.

Mrs. Mason gave a list of toys suitable to different age groups. She concluded by saying if a child could have only one toy, it should be a good set of blocks. Psychologists agree that a set of blocks is the best single toy to possess and secondly, dolls. Mrs. Mason had with her an excellent display of toys.

Crawford, son of Mrs. Louise D. Crawford of 1895 Belmont Road, East Cleveland, formerly of this city. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Orlando Schiavoni of Cleveland.

The noted Church of the Covenant was the scene of the wedding with Dr. Phillip Smead Bird officiating, following a half-hour program of organ music, played by Mr. Charles Allen Rebstock.

The bridal gown was of cream white faille silk with a sweetheart neckline, shirred bodice, and leg-mutton sleeves, fitted tightly from elbow to wrist. The skirt, with a bustle back, flared into a picturesque circular train. The fingertip veil was of cream illusion.

The maid of honor wore a dress of the same fashion, floor length and of tea rose faille. Her small hat was of the same shade. The bridal bouquets were designed around a cluster of calla lilies.

Mr. Raymond Olsen of East Cleveland served as best man.

A reception at the home of the bride's parents followed the ceremony, and at 6:30 p. m., close friends and relatives of the bride and bridegroom were guests at a dinner.

The couple will be at home after December 10 at 1632 Coventry Road, Cleveland Heights, O.

Mr. Crawford is associated with the General Electric Company at the Nela Park experimental laboratories.

plans were discussed for a new membership rally.

The program on the theme, "Everybody's Brother," was in charge of Betty May, prayer, responsive reading and group singing opening the service.

Miss Mabel Noggle read the scripture lesson from the second chapter of Luke, verses eight through 16.

Miss Jessie Cummings read the poem, "Nativity", after which closing thoughts were voiced by Miss May. The reception service for two new members followed. They were presented badges of purple and white ribbon and told of the meaning of the symbol. They were also given the covenant and love offering boxes.

The service closed with the guild song by the Misses Lucille Kirkwood, Mary Ellen Kirkpatrick, Polly Jane Kerns, and Betty Jane May.

Refreshments were served to 20 members.

Logan Elm Grange
All officers were in their chairs for the meeting of Logan Elm Grange Tuesday at Pickaway School auditorium. About 60 grangers were present and enjoyed a variety program arranged by Myron T. Johnson.

Miss Helen Wilson and Miss Dorothy Hinton played a piano duet as the first program number. A comedy skit was presented by Mrs. Charles Dresbach, Mrs. Charles Mowery, Mrs. Eva Dresbach, Mrs. Andrew Warner and Mrs. John Wolford. An old fashioned spelling bee next interested the grangers. Mrs. Austin Wilson winning the prize.

The showing of educational motion pictures closed the entertainment.

The annual Christmas party is planned for the next session, December 19. Mrs. Marvin Dreisbach, grange lecturer, appointed committees for the party and led the discussion of plans. Each guest is requested to take a 10 cent gift for the exchange.

PICKAWAY TEAM EDGES GLENFORD

Hard Contest Ends 37-34 In Favor Of Fighting Pirate Outfit

Pickaway Township's Pirate cagers put a feather in their caps Tuesday evening with a well-earned 37-34 victory over the fast Glenford team of Perry County, the game being played on the Glenford court. The Perry County outfit, coached by Nolan Swackhammer of Laurelville and Ohio University fame, has been going great guns in its own locality and is being touted by many sports fans as a potential Ohio class B titlist.

Six first half buckets by tall George Wilson helped overcome the Glenfordites, H. Shriver adding five goals from the court in the last half for the losers.

Giant Stars Return; Halloran To Referee

NEW YORK, Dec. 6—The New York football Giants, putting in their final training licks before enacting for Milwaukee and the National League championship joust with the Green Bay Packers were considerably heartened today by the encouraging news that both Len "Feet" Barnum and Tuffy Leemans, their backfield aces would be fit for action.

MILWAUKEE, Wis., Dec. 6 — Bill Halloran of Providence, R. I., central figure of the "missed field goal" dispute which arose in last Sunday's game between the Washington Redskins and the New York Giants, was named today as referee of the game between the Giants and the Green Bay Packers Sunday for the pro football championship.

Other officials appointed for the title contest and announced by President Carl Storck of the National Professional Football League were Edward Cochrane of Chicago, umpire, Dan Tehan of Cincinnati, field judge, and Tom Thorpe of New York, head linesman.

MAJOR LEAGUE CONFAB FILLED WITH RUMORS

Several Clubs Would Like To Make Trades, But Others Are Quiet

By Warren Brown

CINCINNATI, Dec. 6—Major leaguers, having finished their training tramping through lobbies that really were set aside for the exclusive use of minor leaguers these last three days, today were prepared to do nothing in an even bigger way as baseball's annual conclave reached its mid-week stage.

If you have just come in, perhaps this ready reference guide will enable you to become as confused as all the rest of us who are lobby tramps for the week: NEW YORK YANKEES—Manager Joe McCarthy sniffed when asked if there was any truth in the report that the Browns' First Baseman McQuinn would come to New York in exchange for Babe Dahlgren, Tom Henrich and Kansas City Shortstop Phil Rizzuto.

NEW YORK GIANTS—Manager Bill Terry has been so busy attending to his minor league holdings (including the ones who played for the Giants last season) he wasn't able to move Zeke Bonura to the Cubs.

CHICAGO CUBS—Attempting to talk trade to Brooklyn and St. Louis as soon as minor leaguers move out of the way

Hard Contest Ends 37-34 In Favor Of Fighting Pirate Outfit

Pickaway Township's Pirate cagers put a feather in their caps Tuesday evening with a well-earned 37-34 victory over the fast Glenford team of Perry County, the game being played on the Glenford court. The Perry County outfit, coached by Nolan Swackhammer of Laurelvile and Ohio University fame, has been going great guns in its own locality and is being touted by many sports fans as a potential Ohio class B titlist.

GIANT STARS RETURN; HALLORAN TO REFEREE

NEW YORK, Dec. 6—The New York football Giants, putting in their final training licks before entertaining for Milwaukee and the National League championship joust with the Green Bay Packers were considerably heartened today by the encouraging news that both Len "Feet" Barnum and Tuffy Leemans, their backfield aces would be fit for action.

MILWAUKEE, Wis., Dec. 6 — Bill Halloran of Providence, R. I., central figure of the "missed field goal" dispute which arose in last Sunday's game between the Washington Redskins and the New York Giants, was named today as referee of the game between the Giants and the Green Bay Packers Sunday for the pro football championship.

Other officials appointed for the title contest and announced by President Carl Storck of the National Professional Football League were Edward Cochrane of Chicago, umpire, Dan Tehan of Cincinnati, field judge, and Tom Thorpe of New York, head linesman.

EDUCATORS TO ASK BUDGET COMMISSION TO RECONSIDER FUND GRANT

SCHOOL BOARD MEETS TO TALK OF 1940 COSTS

$40,000 From Local Taxation May Be Reduced To $34,000 For Next Year

ECONOMIES TO BE NEEDED

Chairman May Say Question Will Not Force Slash In New Term

The Circleville Board of Education will ask the Pickaway County Budget Commission to reconsider the amount granted the schools for operating expenses for 1940.

C. R. Barnhart, clerk of the board, explained Wednesday that the city schools asked for $40,000 from local taxation for operating expenses. Under the rates that have been established by the commission the schools will receive about $34,000, which would necessitate reducing expenses, he said. He said the amount granted Circleville schools for operating expenses is out of proportion with that given in other nearby cities.

He pointed out that the schools have been granted .85 of a mill inside the 10-mill limitation and 1.52 mills are needed. At a recent meeting of the budget commission the city granted the board .1 of a mill from its bond levy fund and Circleville Township granted the schools .05 of a mill from its road fund.

Circleville's rate has been set at $14.50 per $1,000 in property valuation. Since the rate has been established additional funds for the schools would have to be granted by the city or township.

The board of education considered the tax problem at its meeting Tuesday night.

Charles H. May, president of the board, said that Circleville schools would have to reduce expenses under the present amount granted for operating expenses in 1940, but explained that the situation is not so serious as that in some other cities where schools have been forced to close.

"It might be necessary to do without some items and create some debts," he said.

CAMERA GROUP TO COMPETE IN PHOTO CONTEST

Arrangements for a contest among members of the Circleville Camera Club were worked out at the meeting held Tuesday night in Steddom's Studio.

The club will be divided into two teams. At the meetings each month the members will submit prints and the three best prints will be picked out of the group. Scoring will be on a point basis. At the end of the year the winning team will be banqueted by the losing team.

M. E. Noggle spoke at the meeting on making Christmas cards. An exhibit of prints of Don Baker, Coshocton, was shown.

Colored motion pictures of a northern fishing trip and of the Circleville Pumpkin Show were shown by T. E. Wilson.

Next meeting of the club will be held January 10.

MRS. CATHERINE ARNOLD DIES AT HOME OF SON

Mrs. Catherine Arnold, 81, 463 East Franklin Street, died Monday night at the home of her son, Ira Arnold, 2744 Parsons Avenue, Columbus. Mrs. Arnold suffered a stroke three weeks ago. She had been at the home of her son since she became ill.

Mrs. Arnold was born in Circleville on November 2, 1858, a daughter of Jacob and Margaret Schneider Henn. Besides the son she is survived by three grandchildren.

Funeral services will be held in the residence on East Franklin Street at 10 a. m. Thursday. Burial will be in Forest Cemetery. Friends may call at the home.

VOICE ... of the ... PEOPLE

Circleville, Ohio Dec 6
My Dear CIRCULTEER:

Your Open Letter addressed to the N. and W. Officials, DAILY HERALD, Friday, December 1, was gratefully read by the Norfolk and Western family, and no doubt of equal interest to your thousands of readers.

Most people rejoice at the prosperity of others, and the prosperous operation of a railroad is none the less pleasing, because a prosperous railroad is the buyer of some seventy thousand different articles, from lead pencils to massive locomotives, from coffee and tea to steel bridges, and enter practically every county in the country to make these purchases.

A few days ago the Norfolk and Western announced a $5 special dividend, which in itself was a gratifying announcement, but the same notice also carried the good news that $16,000,000 was being expended for equipment and improvements.

In this day when preparedness appears so important to our very civilization, it is also important that the Norfolk and Western be able to break all existing records in car loadings, without inconvenience or delay in transporting nearly a hundred thousand loads in one month, because of their foresight in maintaining a large surplus of equipment, and was prepared with not equipment alone, but facilities and organization to meet every demand of the shipping public.

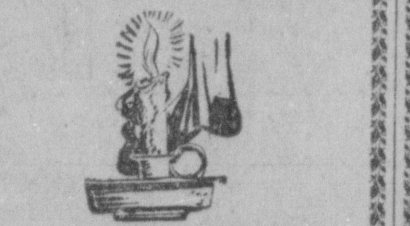

The management of this railroad will be pleased to know that its service and effort in providing a safe economical means of transportation, is appreciated, and that it does have a part in helping Circleville and Pickaway County, and I am taking much pleasure in calling to their attention your

'TEDDY'S' SON AIDING DEWEY

Theodore Roosevelt, Jr., Many Others Reported In Camp Of New Yorker

NEW YORK, Dec. 6—A dozen close advisers are plotting the strategy of the campaign for the Republican presidential nomination which District Attorney Thomas E. Dewey opens today in Minneapolis but the suggestion that they might constitute a "brain trust" was answered with a laugh by the young prosecutor before departing for the West.

Prominent in the list of advisers made public by Dewey were Mrs. Ruth Hanna McCormick Simms, former congresswoman; Arthur T. Vanderbilt, a former president of the American Bar Association, and Col. Theodore Roosevelt, Jr., a son of "Teddy."

The others are John F. Dulles, foreign affairs authority; Charles P. Sison, former assistant attorney general; Elliott V. Beal, financial writer; Edwin F. Jaecle, chairman of the New York Republican executive committee; Oswald D. Heck, speaker of the New York state assembly; Joe R. Hanley, majority leader of the New York state senate; J. Russell Sprague, the Dewey campaign manager, and John E. Burton and Shelby Davis, research assistants.

Most of these advisers were regarded in political circles as being on the conservative side. Dewey's aides said it would be erroneous to make any assumptions concerning the extent to which he would be guided by their collective or individual advice.

increase in the papers, frantically awaited the telegram.

Finally, at about 10:30, he telephoned Washington and had the telegram read to him. However, regulations make customs offices await the receipt of telegraphic orders before raising the tariff, so although the telegram was read over the phone at 10:30, it was not actually received in New York until 12:54 noon Sept. 12. So it was exactly 12:54 that the tariff was increased from 90 cents to $1.50.

Meanwhile sugar dealers were dumping sugar in New York at the old tariff rate of 90 cents. And they dumped so much before 12:54 noon that the Government lost around $2,000,000.

CAPITAL CHAFF

If you don't see much of Frank Murphy these days the reason is that he is doing a lot of behind-the-scenes digging to bring about a labor peace. Both he and Roosevelt are desperately anxious to put this across before Frank goes up on the Supreme Court. . . .

Movie star Melvyn Douglas garnered more fans in the White House last week when President and Mrs. Roosevelt gave a dinner for him. At a New Deal luncheon also he met almost the entire Inner Circle—Ickes, Murphy, Tom Corcoran, Ben Cohen, Aubrey Williams, Lowell Mellett, Leon Henderson. All, incidentally, were invited to Hollywood. All accepted. . . .

Business moguls who hear Senator Burt Wheeler at the National Manufacturers Association annual spurge this week may be interested to know that he got the OK of labor before accepting the invitation. Wheeler was especially meticulous about getting the OK of the Railroad Brotherhoods and John L. Lewis. . . . Burt has his eye very much on 1940.

quiescent banker—New Deal feud flares up again soon.

Inner Administrationites are sputtering mad over what happened at a secret meeting held in New York by Robert Hanes, new president of the American Bankers Association. To 100 leading bankers he had summoned, the North Carolinian proposed that a fund of $250,000 be raised to be used for "educational" purposes on such legislative issues as the Mead loans-to-little-businessmen bill which the ABA has bitterly opposed.

The New Dealers are convinced that the real object behind the fund is to finance a large-scale attack on the Administration. But what is making them see red is the fact that a number of the bankers at the secret pow-wow had their financial hides saved by government rescue measures in the early months of the New Deal.

Various plans are being discussed in the inner circle on the best way to hit back at the bankers. One proposal is for the President to fire a blast at them. Another that the Senate Banking Committee, headed by New York Dealer Bob Wagner, call Hanes and other ABA leaders for a public cross-examination. A third is to have the TNEC (antimonopoly) committee crack down. Note: Hanes is a brother of Johnny Hanes, Undersecretary of the Treasury.

EDUCATORS TO ASK BUDGET COMMISSION TO RECONSIDER FUND GRANT

SCHOOL BOARD MEETS TO TALK OF 1940 COSTS

$40,000 From Local Taxation May Be Reduced To $34,000 For Next Year

ECONOMIES TO BE NEEDED

Chairman May Say Question Will Not Force Slash In New Term

The Circleville Board of Education will ask the Pickaway County Budget Commission to reconsider the amount granted the schools for operating expenses for 1940.

C. R. Barnhart, clerk of the board, explained Wednesday that the city schools asked for $40,000 from local taxation for operating expenses. Under the rates that have been established by the commission the schools will receive about $34,000, which would necessitate reducing expenses, he said. He said the amount granted Circleville schools for operating expenses is out of proportion with that given in other nearby cities.

He pointed out that the schools have been granted .85 of a mill inside the 10-mill limitation and 1.52 mills are needed. At a recent meeting of the budget commission the city granted the board .1 of a mill from its bond levy fund and Circleville Township granted the schools .05 of a mill from its road fund.

Circleville's rate has been set at $14.80 per $1,000 in property valuation. Since the rate has been established additional funds for the schools would have to be granted by the city or township.

The board of education considered the tax problem at its meeting Tuesday night.

Charles H. May, president of the board, said that Circleville schools would have to reduce expenses under the present amount granted for operating expenses in 1940, but explained that the situation is not so serious as that in some other cities where schools have been forced to close.

"It might be necessary to do without some items and create some debts," he said.

CAMERA GROUP TO COMPETE IN PHOTO CONTEST

Arrangements for a contest among members of the Circleville Camera Club were worked out at the meeting held Tuesday night in Steddom's Studio.

The club will be divided into two teams. At the meetings each month the members will submit prints and the three best prints will be picked out of the group. Scoring will be on a point basis. At the end of the year the winning team will be banqueted by the losing team.

M. E. Noggle spoke at the meeting on making Christmas cards. An exhibit of prints of Don Buker, Coshocton, was shown.

Colored motion pictures of a northern fishing trip and of the Circleville Pumpkin Show were shown by T. E. Wilson.

Next meeting of the club will be held January 10.

VOICE ... of the ... PEOPLE

Circleville, Ohio Dec 6
My Dear CIRCUITER:

Your Open Letter addressed to the N. and W. Officials, DAILY HERALD, Friday, December 1, was gratefully read by the Norfolk and Western family, and no doubt of equal interest to your thousands of readers.

Most people rejoice at the prosperity of others, and the prosperous operation of a railroad is none the less pleasing, because a prosperous railroad is the buyer of some seventy thousand different articles, from lead pencils to massive locomotives, from coffee and tea to steel bridges, and enter practically every county in the country to make these purchases.

A few days ago the Norfolk and Western announced a $5 special dividend, which in itself was a gratifying announcement, but the same notice also carried the good news that $16,000,000 was being expended for equipment and improvements.

In this day when preparedness appears so important to our very civilization, it is also important that the Norfolk and Western was able to break all existing records in car loadings, without inconvenience or delay in transporting nearly a hundred thousand loads in one month, because of their foresight in maintaining a large surplus of equipment, and was prepared with not equipment alone, but facilities and organization to meet every demand of the shipping public.

The management of this railroad will be pleased to know that its service and effort in providing a safe economical means of transportation, is appreciated, and that it does have a part in helping Circleville and Pickaway County, and I am taking much pleasure in calling to their attention your increase in the papers, frantically awaited the telegram.

Finally, at about 10:30, he telephoned Washington and had the telegram read to him. However, regulations make customs offices await the receipt of telegraphic orders before raising the tariff, so although the telegram was read over the phone at 10:30, it was not actually received in New York until 12:54 noon Sept. 12. So it was exactly 12:54 that the tariff was increased from 90 cents to $1.50.

Meanwhile sugar dealers were dumping sugar in New York at the old tariff rate of 90 cents. And they dumped so much before 12:54 noon that the Government lost around $2,000,000.
